

LEGAL NEURAL NETWORKS
by Lawtest

PRIVACY POLICY

October 14, 2018

1. Introduction

This Privacy Policy (the "Privacy Policy") explains the collection, use, processing, transfer and disclosure of "personal information" on the lawtest.org website that applies to those who use our website as defined below.

This Privacy Policy also explains our respect for you regarding our use, processing, transmission and disclosure of non-personal information when using our website, which lawtest.org collects as a Service Provider.

"Non-personal views and usage data" refers to the information that lawtest.org collects indirectly and automatically about your actions when visiting a website and using the Services using tools such as Google Analytics and the like. The type of information we collect focuses on general information such as the general location, country or city where you are (not intentionally, location information), visited pages, visitor activity on the site, information about the browser you are using, and etc. In addition, whenever you log into the site or use our services, our servers (which, again, can be hosted by a third-party service provider), store a simple text operation log.

2. Our principles

Lawtest, assumes responsibility for the personal information and data that we collect and process about you, whether it's personal information or viewing and data about the use of the site. We have developed our Privacy Policy in accordance with the following principles (the "Principles"):

- Privacy policies, including provisions for the collection, processing and use of data, should be public, comprehensive and search-friendly;
- It is necessary to process, collect and maintain only the minimum amount of personal information reasonably required to provide you services, and only where reasonably necessary or required, in accordance with the principles of proportionality; and
- The personal information that you provide when registering in your personal account, or that we collect as a result of the purchase of our tokens, should not be used for marketing or advertising purposes and should not be provided voluntarily (without your permission) to anyone else, if this is not required.

3. Collecting personal information on Lawtest.

We can collect and process personal information through interaction with our site, including, without limitation:

- in connection with your choice of one of our tokens;
- when you provide us with your personal information, for example by sending us an email or subscribing to receive updates from Lawtest;
- when subscribing to one of our topics for discussion, by e-mail;
- when you buy a token;
- when creating a logon account of the Lawtest login service;
- when you use the Lawtest site ;;

In particular, the following personal information will at least be collected:

- Name;
- E-mail address;
- the country in which you are and / or whom you voluntarily chose for communication;
- Any other information that you choose to provide or that Lawtest may request;

This personal information will only be available to Lawtest.

4. What does Lawtest with personal information

We use the personal information that you provide to us to send you information by e-mail in the form of letters and newsletters.

We use the personally identifiable information you provide to us when you send us emails or subscribe to receive updates from Lawtest to respond to your request - for example, to reply to your email address or send you news about Lawtest news.

When you subscribe to updates from us, your email address is sent and stored in the customer relationship management database (for example, MailChimp or CiviCRM) hosted on servers that only Lawtest employees can access and contractors. Lawtest may change the CRM system (s) from time to time.

Currently, Lawtest; when you buy tokens, asks you to provide your name and surname, and also records your IP address when making any financial transaction on our site. You agree and agree that Lawtest; can use and process your information in connection with the use and processing of your service order with any third-party payment processors for processing your payment. Your information is governed by the privacy policies of such third-party websites, and you agree to the transfer of your information to these websites and service providers. Lawtest; is not responsible for the processing and use of your information on third-party sites.

When you buy a token from us, your personal information will be used to send you the tokens you bought. If you register to receive updates from Lawtest, we will use your personal information to send you news about Lawtest news.

5. Disclosure of Personal Information

In general, the practice of Lawtest; Do not disclose personal information to third parties. Except as provided herein, we may disclose your personal information in the following cases:

1. First, Lawtest can share personal information with our contractors and service providers in order to maintain, improve or add functionality to the Services, organize and launch the event for which you have registered for participation.
2. Secondly, we may disclose your personal information to third parties with the good faith belief that such disclosure is reasonable and necessary: (a) to take action against alleged illegal activities; (b) to ensure the application of our main terms and this Privacy Policy; (c) in the observance of legal proceedings, such as a search warrant, subpoena, court decision or order; or (e) consider legitimate interests pursued by Lawtest or a third party (unless such interests are overlapped by the interests or fundamental rights and freedoms of the data subject that require the protection of personal data, in particular when the data subject is a child) and ensure compliance with applicable laws.

6. Security of personal information collected through services

Lawtest has implemented reasonable physical, technical and organizational security measures for personal information that Lawtest processes, transfers, stores and controls accidental or illegal destruction or accidental loss, alteration, unauthorized disclosure or access in accordance with applicable law. However, no website can completely eliminate security threats. Third parties can bypass our security measures to illegally intercept or gain access to transfers or private messages. If any violation occurs while storing personal data, we will publish a noticeable notice on the website and provide all other applicable data confidentiality requirements, including, if necessary, a personal notice to you, if you have provided, and we have retained your E-mail address.

7. Information from cookies and similar technologies

We and our service providers (for example, Google Analytics, as described in section 1 above) can collect information using cookies or similar technologies for the purposes described above and below. Cookies are pieces of information that are stored in your browser on the hard drive or in the memory of your computer or other Internet access device. Cookies can allow us to personalize your experience in the Services, maintain a persistent session, passively collect demographic information about your computer and track advertisements and other events. Sites can use different types of cookies and other types of local storage (for example, local storage based on a browser or plug-in).

8. Non-personal viewing and information about the use of the site. We process and collect

When you use Lawtest, our servers (which can be hosted by third-party service providers) can process and collect information indirectly and automatically (for example, by using your "IP address") about your activities while visiting the site and using our Services, information about the country in which you are, and the browser that you are using. In addition, we use the website services and application analytics provided by third parties who use cookies and other similar technologies to collect information about the use of Web sites and Services, as well as reporting trends without identifying individual visitors (this is all refers to the category "non-personal viewing" and information about the use of the site, for the purposes of this Privacy Policy and as described in Section 1. Third parties who provide us with these services may also collect information about the use you can learn about Google's practice with this collection of information and how to opt out by downloading the Google Analytics browser add-on available at <https://tools.google.com/dlpage/gaoptout>. Whenever you use your account on Lawtest, our servers (which, again, can be hosted by third-party service providers), keep a log of your website visits. We can provide information about the personal viewing we collect to our third-party service providers in connection with the services they provide.

9. Lack of binding

We do not intentionally link viewing information or information from our Lawtest logon server logs to personal information that you represent to us. We use this information only for internal purposes, for example, to help understand how Services are used, to improve our Services and for system administration. Lawtest can use third-party analytics providers (for example, Google Analytics, as described in section 1 above) to help us collect and analyze non-personal viewing and usage information using our Services for the same purposes.

10. Lack of sale or sharing

Except for the unique situations defined in this Privacy Policy, Lawtest does not sell or otherwise voluntarily provide non-personal information about the viewing we collect and process about you or about the use of the site by third parties.

11. Lack of access; Learn more about the Lawtest logon services.

As a provider of Lawtest logon services, Lawtest can access your online account linked to such services and can log on behalf of any registered user to any of the accounts that they contacted using the Lawtest logon services. Lawtest will never use this technical log-in opportunity for any purpose, except as provided by law.

12. Saving data

Lawtest usually discards non-personal viewing information from our systems as soon as we use the information for the limited purposes described above and described elsewhere in this Privacy Policy.

Nevertheless, we can, but do not have to keep certain data in connection with routine backups of information technology and for archival purposes, as well as carrying out the procedure for the KSK (know your client) that the supervisory authorities require of us.

13. Notification

Any other non-personal information we collect that is not specifically described in this Privacy Policy will be collected, processed, transmitted and used only in accordance with the Principles.

14. Reorganization

Lawtest may transfer part or all of your personal and / or non-personal information to third parties as a result of reorganization, merger or similar events. In this transfer, the purchaser's privacy policy applies. In this case, Lawtest will make reasonable efforts to notify you and ensure that at the time of the transaction the purchaser's privacy policy is in accordance with the Lawtest Principles and all applicable laws.

15. Children

- A. Our main terms specifically prohibit anyone who uses our sites from providing any personal information about persons under 13 years of age.
- B. Any person providing their personal information to Lawtest through our Services confirms that they are over 18 years of age or more.

16. Third-Party Sites

Services may include links to other websites. You should familiarize yourself with the relevant privacy policies of these third-party sites. This Privacy Policy does not apply to them, and we can not control the activities of such other websites.

17. Special note for international users

If you are using or using the Services in the regions with laws governing the collection, processing, transfer and use of data, please note that we may transfer your information to recipients in countries other than the country in which this information was originally collected. These countries may not have the same data protection legislation as the country in which you originally provided the information. The services are located in the European Union. Please note that your personal information can be placed on servers in the European Union. By submitting your personal information and checking all necessary fields, you expressly agree to use your personal information for the use specified above in accordance with the Privacy Policy.

18. Accuracy of collected personal information

Lawtest intends to keep personal information accurate and up-to-date. We also retain personal information longer than necessary to fulfill the objectives described in section 3 above, or in accordance with the requirements of law. If you need to make changes to your personal information, please let us know immediately. If you tell us about the changes or we will otherwise become aware of any actual inaccuracies in your personal information, we will immediately make the necessary changes. You also have the option to update some of your personal information yourself through your account or Lawtest profile, if you have one.

19. Access to personal information

Along with all other rights granted to you in accordance with applicable law, you can at any time request information about the personal information that Lawtest has. If you want to access such personal information, you must submit a written application to Lawtest. You, as a rule, have the right to access to personal data stored in Lawtest, and to incorrect data, corrected or deleted, as long as Lawtest still supports it. In certain circumstances, you may also have the right to object for legitimate reasons for the processing or transmission of personal information.

20. Changes and updates to this Privacy Policy

Sometimes we can update this Privacy Policy. When we do, we will notify you of such an update with (at a minimum) sufficiently noticeable notice on the website and services and rework the Effective Date below. We recommend that you periodically review this Privacy Policy to be aware of how we protect, use, process and transfer the personal information we collect.